++ Valid for broadcast between 0600 and 1800

Headline:
Cloudy and wet, but more settled conditions later.

Today:
Starting mostly cloudy with showery rain clearing eastwards over the country through the morning. A largely dry afternoon with sunny spells and the odd passing cloud. Maximum temperature 19 deg C (66 deg F).

Tonight:
A dry night with long clear spells, especially to the west, and light winds. The chance for some patchy mist and fog forming in prone spots across southwest Wales. Minimum temperature 8 deg C (46 deg F).

Monday:
A fine and dry day once any morning mist or fog has cleared with plenty of sunshine. Temperatures slightly higher than on Sunday. Light winds. Maximum temperature 20 deg C (68 deg F).

Outlook for Tuesday to Thursday:
Fine and dry with sunny spells Tuesday after fog patches have cleared. Turning breezy on Wednesday as rain crosses much of the country. Remaining unsettled Thursday with further showery outbreaks.
